INTRODUCTORY.

In offering this Directory to the citizens of Colorado Springs, Colorado City and Manitou, we wish to say that it has been our purpose to make it as complete and accurate as a first publication of the kind can be.

We desire to express our thanks for many courtesies shown us, and we trust that a kind Providence may continue the prosperity of the places for which the work is intended.

In the future as other editions shall be required, no effort will be spared to make them measure with the growth of the cities.

COLORADO SPRINGS.

The town of Colorado Springs is located on a beautiful plateau in the valley of the Fontaine qui Bouille on the Denver and Rio Grande Railway, seventy-five miles south of Denver, and forty-five miles north of Pueblo, in latitude $38^{\circ} 50' 0.28''$, and longitude $104^{\circ} 49' 15.1''$, according to Prof. Dean of the U. S. Coast Survey. It is situated about five miles from the base of the mountains which here rise suddenly from the gently rolling prairie without the intervening foot-hills so common to mountain ranges. Immediately west of the town Pike's Peak, the great landmark of the Rocky Mountains, rises to an altitude of 14,336 feet, its snow-clad summit being accessible by good trails from the Springs, can be readily reached on horseback in five or six hours, the round trip being now frequently made in a day.

The town was founded by the Colorado Springs Company in 1871, the first stake having been driven upon what was then the open prairie, on the last day of July of that year. The town site as originally platted and recorded included an area of about 300 acres, but it has since been greatly enlarged by two additions and now covers some 1,200 acres. The streets, which are laid out at right angles run nearly north and south and east and west, the former being over two miles and the latter about three-fourths of a mile in length. They are from 100 feet to 140 feet in width. The blocks are each four hundred feet square, and are divided by alleys twenty feet wide, running generally north and south. The lots in the centre or business part of the town are 25 feet front by 190 feet deep. The residence lots are generally 50 feet by 190 feet, but many of those in the suburbs of the town are much larger. The land surrounding the town site is laid out into ten, twenty and forty acre pieces, many of which are well cultivated, and otherwise improved. The town is amply supplied with irrigating water, which is carried through sixty miles of main and lateral canals along each side of every street, outside of the sidewalks. Along these canals, at intervals of twenty-five feet, have been planted over seven thousand shade trees which are growing rapidly and give the town the appearance of a vast grove. Water for drinking and culinary purposes is obtained from Ruxton's creek, five miles to the westward, a stream that has its source in springs near the top of Pike's Peak. It is carried by gravity through nineteen miles of cast iron pipe throughout every part of the town. The supply is ample for a population of twenty thousand persons, and in purity and healthfulness it is unexceptionable. The water rates are lower than in any town or city in the State.

The educational interests of the town are carefully attended to. The public school building is one of the finest structures in the State. Colorado Collegè, one of the most flourishing institutions of learning in the New West, is located here. Its magnificent new building and ample campus, including one hundred acres of valuable ground in the northern portion of the town, excite the admiration of all who visit the place. In addition to the above there are several private schools for the young.

All of the principal religious denominations are represented here. The Episcopalians, Baptists, Presbyterians, Cumberland Presbyterians, Methodists, Congregationalists, Unitarians and Catholics have well built churches and large and growing congregations.

The present population of the town, August 20th, 1879, is from 5,000 to 5,500, not including the many persons—probably numbering fully a thousand—who are always temporarily stopping here for health or pleasure.

A large mercantile business is done in Colorado Springs.

During the year ending July 31, 1879, lumber, groceries, flour, feed, grain, dry goods, boots and shoes, hardware, drugs, etc., etc., were sold to the amount of $2,000,000. In addition to this about $175,000 worth of wool was marketed here. El Paso county, of which Colorado Springs is the capital, now stands at the head of the wool producing counties of the State. Probably 200,000 head of sheep are now pastured upon its luxuriant grasses. The wool clip from these the past season aggregated over 800,000 pounds. Seventy-seven individuals and firms are engaged in wool growing in the county, most of them residing in, and all drawing their supplies from Colorado Springs. This is also the centre of a large trade in horses and beef cattle.

The livery business is conducted on a large scale, there being no fewer than six establishments of the kind in the town. Several of them are not exceeded with respect to the kind and quality of their stock by any in the State.

There are three banks in Colorado Springs, one National and two private, which justly rank among the soundest financial institutions in the west.

The altitude of Colorado Springs, 6,000 feet above the level of the sea, its protection in a great measure from the north and west winds, by the Divide on the north and the mountain range on the west, render the climate of this locality one of the most salubrious and delightful to be found in the world. Its altitude and proximity to the mountains temper the summer heat, the nights during that season being always cool enough for comfort. During the autumn and winter months the atmosphere is dry and invigorating with almost uninterrupted sunshine. But little rain falls during the autumn and none in the winter, and usually the snow fall is confined to the spring months when the ground being warm, it soon melts away. Thousands of invalids of all classes flock hither and to Manitou, and nearly all find relief from their respective ailments, while very many, particularly those suffering from asthma, throat and lung troubles, dyspepsia and general debility, are permanently cured.

The scenery around Colorado Springs is of the most beautiful and varied description. Within an hour's drive of the town, over magnificent roads, can be seen some of the grandest combinations of natural views upon the continent. Among the places which should be visited by all who come to this locality are the following:

CHEYENNE MOUNTAIN, over the new carriage road leading through beautiful mountain scenery to Beaver Creek, and by the Seven Lakes to the summit of Pike's Peak.

CHEYENNE CANON to the falls of Cheyenne Creek.

MANITOU, with its celebrated mineral springs.

UTE PASS and the falls of the Fountain.

IRON SPRINGS in Engleman's Canon.

MANITOU CANON and the grotto therein.

SUMMIT OF PIKE'S PEAK, either by Bear Creek or Ruxton's Creek.

MANITOU PARK in the mountains, 25 miles from Colorado Springs.

GARDEN OF THE GODS.

GLEN EYRIE.

MONUMENT PARK.

AUSTIN'S BLUFFS and ranche.

Of the view of the mountains from Colorado Springs an able writer says:—

"The main range itself is out of sight, but Pike's Peak and Cheyenne Mountain, two of the grandest mountains in the whole system, are in full view, each magnificent with a glory of its own; and there is a symmetry, yet a diversity, in the whole scene that is presented to the vision, which is, we believe, unique.

Immediately in the foreground, run the Monument and the Fountain, their course marked by a luxuriant growth of Cottonwood and Willow, and the rich bottom land along their borders quickly coming under cultivation. Beyond, there stretches a long line of low hills, or rather the cliffs of a long plateau, known as the "Mesa," its surface level almost as a table (whence its name), and its long straight line contrasting sharply with the serrated mountains behind. Opposite to the point of view, the Mesa is broken through, allowing the passage of the Fountain which runs down from the west, and then, receiving the tribute of the Monument, turns somewhat sharply towards the south. To the left, Bear Creek and Cheyenne Creek, hastening also to pour their waters into the Fountain, break up the surface of the Mesa, and relieve its uniformity by their groves of Cottonwood and other trees.

Looking a little to the right, the vermilion rocks of the Gate of the "Garden of the Gods," which lies in a hollow on the far side of the Mesa, are seen rising above its level, and the "Hog Back," of which they form a part—a curious series of upturned and shattered sand-stone rocks—can be traced some distance to the left, somewhat like a long double wall following the contour of the lower spurs of the Foot-Hills.

Straight in front, rising to a height of 14,336 feet, and apparently but four or five miles distant (though really fourteen or fifteen) is Pike's Peak.

No other Peak of the whole system possesses such an interest as this, for, though it lacks a few feet of being the loftiest, its associations give it a paramount importance. Long ago it was the beacon-tower from which the red men telegraphed with flaming signals to their comrades far away upon the plains or amongst the Parks and Mountains. And in later days, it has generally been the first point seen by the traveler crossing the Plains. It was on the 15th of November, 1806, that Major Pike, in command of the first expedition sent out to explore this region by the War Department, caught sight of the Peak which has ever since bore his name. Then with one accord he and his small party gave three cheers for the "Mexican Mountain." In 1858, the "Pike's Peak gold fever" set in, reaching its culmination in the following year, when thousands made their way from all parts of the States to the new El Dorado, confident of speedy fortune. To such the Peak was the great landmark for which they eagerly strained their eyes, day after day, in their toilsome pilgrimage, and the first sight of it gave a fresh impetus to their energy and courage as their visions of wealth grew nearer and clearer. Now, the traveler, as he is borne rapidly and comfortably along the iron highway, looks out impatiently from his cushioned car in search of the same great beacon.

As seen from Colorado Springs, Pike's Peak is a dome-like summit, with a long broken spur running in a north-westerly direction. The lower portion of the mountain is hidden by the Foot Hills in front, which seem to lead up to its slope by a series of gradual ascents; but the whole bulk of the mountain from below timber-line to its summit, is in full view, sublimely beautiful, wrapt in snowy vesture, and resting in eternal calm, continually renewing its spotless garment from the darkest, angriest storms, and flinging back the brilliance of the sunniest skies.

Southward, the view terminates in Cheyenne, a mountain hitherto of comparatively little note and of no great height, but of remarkable beauty. Unlike Pike's Peak, its whole mass is in full view, and it has a completeness and an integrity which impart to it a particularly majestic character, while it possesses all the variety and picturesqueness which belong to the Foot-Hills rather than to the great Peaks.

MANITOU.

The town of Manitou, celebrated for its soda and iron springs, is located in a beautiful glen among the mountains, at the very foot of Pike's Peak, about $5\frac{1}{2}$ miles west of Colorado Springs, with which it is connected by an excellent road leading from the latter town to the great mining regions of South Park and the Upper Arkansas. The site of this town, like that of Colorado Springs, was purchased in 1871 by the Colorado Springs Company, which at once commenced the work of development by the erection of a spacious hotel known as the Manitou House, containing sixty rooms, which was finished and opened for guests in the autumn of 1872. Since then, several additional hotels have been erected, two of which, the Manitou Mansions, popularly known as the Beebee House, built by an English company, and the Cliff House, located at the mouth of Manitou Canon, are large, elegantly appointed houses. There are two or three other small but comfortable hotels or boarding houses, where the cost of living is less than at the larger hotels. In the summer season Manitou is thronged with health and pleasure seekers from all parts of the United States and Europe. During the season of 1878, which was unusually short, 5,651 visitors registered at the several hotels. Owing to its thorough protection from the winds, Manitou is a favorite winter resort for invalids. A number of beautiful villas have been erected here. The present population of the town is about 400. All the scenery tributary to Colorado Springs is equally accessible from Manitou. The town is well supplied with pure mountain water, in pipes, under heavy pressure.

The mineral springs which have given to this locality a world-wide popularity are eight in number: The Navajoe, the original FONTAINE QUI BOUILLE, or boiling fountain, which gave the name to the creek which it still retains; the Manitou, the water of which resembles that of the famous Seltzer springs in Nassau, as well as that of the Krahuchen springs at Ems; the Shoshone; the Comanche; the Misha-Tunga; the Pawnee; the Iron Ute, and the Little Chief. The latter two are located on Ruxton's creek, while all the others are close to the Fountain. The following analysis of the waters of the principal springs at Manitou have been made by Prof. O. Loew, Mineralogist and Chemist of the Wheeler Expedition. A comparison is made with the waters of the celebrated springs at Spa, in Belgium:—

These springs were formerly constantly resorted to by the Indians, who not only recognized their refreshing character and their medicinal virtues, but regarded them as special manifestations of the power and goodness of "Manitou"—the Great Spirit. Captain Ruxton, who visited them in 1847, relates a curious legend concerning their origin which, he says, was still current at that date, amongst the Comanches and Shoshones. He says:—

The Indians regard with awe the "medicine" waters of these fountains, as being the abode of a spirit who breathes through the transparent water, and thus, by his exhalations, causes the perturbation of its surface. The Arapahoes, especially, attribute to this water-god the power of ordaining the success or miscarriage of their war expeditions; and as their braves pass often by the mysterious springs, when in search of their hereditary enemies, the Yutas, in the "Valley of Salt," they never fail to deposit their votive offering upon the water sprite, in order to propitiate the "Manitou" of the fountain, and insure a fortunate issue to their "path of war."

Thus at the time of my visit the basin of the spring was filled with beads and wampum, and pieces of red cloth and knives, while the surrounding trees were hung with strips of deerskin, cloth, and moccasins.

The Snakes, who, in common with all Indians, possess hereditary legends to account for all natural phenomena, or any extraordinary occurrences which are beyond their ken or comprehension, have, of course, their legendary version of the causes which created, in the midst of their hunting-grounds, these two springs of sweet and bitter water; which are also intimately connected with the cause of separation between the tribes of the "Comanche" and the "Snake." Thus runs the legend:

Many hundreds of winters ago, when the cottonwoods on the Big River were no higher than an arrow, and the red men, who hunted the buffalo on the plains, all spoke the same language, and the pipe of peace breathed its social cloud of kinnikinic whenever two parties of hunters met on the boundless plains—when, with hunting-grounds and game of every kind in the greatest abundance, no nation dug up the hatchet with another because one of its hunters followed the game into their bounds, but, on the contrary, loaded for him his back with choice and fattest meat, and ever proffered the soothing pipe before the stranger, with well-filled belly, left the village—it happened that two hunters of different nations met one day on a small rivulet, where both had repaired to quench their thirst. A little stream of water, rising from a spring on a rock within a few feet of the bank, trickled over it, and fell splashing into the river. To this the hunters repaired; and while one sought the spring itself, where the water, cold and clear, reflected on its surface the surrounding scenery, the other, tired by his exertions in the chase, threw himself at once to the ground, and plunged his face into the running stream.

The latter had been unsuccessful in the chase, and perhaps his bad fortune, and the sight of the fat deer which the other hunter threw from his back before he drank at the crystal spring, caused a feeling of jealousy and ill-humor to take possession of his mind. The other, on the contrary, before he satisfied his thirst, raised in the hollow of his hand a portion of the water, and, lifting it toward the sun, reversed his hand, and allowed it to fall to the ground—a libation to the Great Spirit who had vouchsafed him a successful hunt, and the blessing of the refreshing water with which he was about to quench his thirst.

Seeing this, and being reminded that he had neglected the usual offering, only increased the feeling of envy and annoyance which the unsuccessful hunter permitted to get the mastery of his heart; and the Evil Spirit at that moment entering his body, his temper fairly flew away, and he sought some pretense by which to provoke a quarrel with the stranger Indian at the spring.

"Why does a stranger," he asked, rising from the stream at the same time, "drink at the spring-head, when one to whom the fountain belongs contents himself with the water that runs from it?"

"The Great Spirit places the cool water at the spring," answered the other hunter, "that his children may drink it pure and undefiled. The running water is for the beasts which scour the plains. Au-sa-qua is a chief of the Shoshone; he drinks at the head-water."

"The Shoshone is but a tribe of the Comanche," returned the other; "Waco-mish leads the grand nation. Why does a Shoshone dare to drink above him?"

"He has said it. The Shoshone drinks at the spring-head; other nations of the stream which runs into the fields. Au-sa-qua is chief of his nation. The Comanches are brothers. Let them both drink of the same water."

"The Shoshone pays tribute to the Comanche. Waco-mish leads that nation to war. Waco-mish is chief of the Shoshone, as he is of his own people."

"Waco-mish lies; his tongue is forked like the rattle-snake's; his heart is black as the Misho-tunga (bad spirit). When the Manitou made his children, whether Shoshone or Comanche, Arapahoe, Shian, or Paine, he gave them buffalo to eat, and the pure water of the fountain to quench their thirst. He said not to one, drink here, and to another, drink there; but gave the crystal spring to all, that all might drink."

Waco-mish almost burst with rage as the other spoke; but his coward heart alone prevented him from provoking an encounter with the calm Shoshone. He, made thirsty by the words he had spoken—for the red man is ever sparing of his tongue—again stooped down to the spring to quench his thirst, when the subtle warrior of the Comanche suddenly threw himself upon the kneeling hunter, and, forcing his head into the bubbling water, held him down with all his strength, until his victim no longer struggled, his stiffened limbs relaxed, and he fell forward over the spring, drowned and dead.

Over the body stood the murderer, and no sooner was the deed of blood consummated than bitter remorse took possession of his mind, where before had reigned the fiercest passion and vindictive hate. With hands clasped to his forehead, he stood transfixed with horror, intently gazing on his victim, whose head still remained immersed in the fountain. Mechanically he dragged the body a few paces from the water, which, as soon as the head of the dead Indian was withdrawn, the Comanche saw suddenly and strangely disturbed. Bubbles sprang up from the bottom, and, rising to the surface, escaped in hissing gas. A thin, vapory cloud arose, and, gradually dissolving, displayed to the eyes of the trembling murderer the figure of an aged Indian, whose long, snowy hair and venerable beard, blown aside by a gentle air from his breast, discovered the well-known totem of the great Wan-kan-aga, the father of the Comanche and Shoshone nation, whom the traditions of the tribe, handed down by skillful hieroglyphics, almost deified for the good actions and deeds of bravery this famous warrior had performed when on earth.

Stretching out a war-club toward the affrighted murderer, the figure thus addressed him:—

"Accursed of thy tribe! this day thou hast severed the link between the mightiest nations of the world, while the blood of the brave Shoshone cries to the Manitou for vengeance. May the water of thy tribe be rank and bitter in their throats!" Thus saying, and swinging his ponderous war-club (made from the elk's horn) round his head, he dashed out the brains of the Comanche, who fell headlong into the spring, which, from that day to the present moment, remains rank and nauseous, so that, not even when half dead with thirst, can one drink the foul water of that spring.

The good Wan-kan-aga, however, to perpetuate the memory of the Shoshone warrior, who was renowned in his tribe for valor and nobleness of heart, struck with the same avenging club a hard flat rock, which overhung the rivulet, just out of sight of this scene of blood; and forthwith the rock opened into a round, clear basin, which instantly filled with bubbling sparkling water, than which no thirsty hunter ever drank a sweeter or a cooler draught.

Thus two springs remain, an everlasting memento of the foul murder of the brave Shoshone, and the stern justice of the good Wan-kan-aga; and from that day the two mighty tribes of the Shoshone and Comanche have remained severed and apart; although a long and bloody war followed the treacherous murder of the Shoshone chief, and many a scalp torn from the head of the Comanche paid the penalty of his death.

An excellent work on the Mineral Waters and Climate of Manitou has been written by Dr. S. E. Solly, of Colorado Springs.

COLORADO COLLEGE.

This College, founded in 1874, aims to furnish facilities for a liberal education to the rapidly increasing population of Colorado and the adjacent territories. More than fifty acres of valuable land have been deeded to the College by the Colorado Springs Company; and through the liberality of the citizens of the town a handsome and commodious building of stone is now being erected, which it is expected will soon be ready for occupation. The funds and lands pledged for a permanent endowment amount to nearly fifty thousand dollars. The College is not subject to ecclesiastical or political control. The Board of Trustees, composed of representatives of various denominations, fills its own vacancies, and appoints the corps of instruction. In the general intelligence and good order of its people, and in the prevailing moral and Christian influences, which are such important factors in the education of youth, Colorado Springs is not excelled by any college town in the land. The sale of intoxicating liquors for a beverage is forbidden in all deeds of land granted, and is prohibited by ordinance. Students can worship at either of the following churches:—Roman Catholic, Episcopal, Presbyterian, Cumberland Presbyterian, Methodist, Baptist, or Congregational.

YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

ROOMS No's. 11 AND 13, UNION BLOCK.

The organization of this association was effected on the 12th day of November, A. D. 1878, at the Baptist church, by the adoption of a good constitution, showing the design of the association to be a united effort to promote the interests of evangelical religion in this city, especially among young people, and under that constitution the following officers were elected:

J. H. Woodgate, President; Geo. De La Vergne, First Vice President; Linus E. Sherman, Second Vice President; A. H. Corman, Treasurer; J. C. Pierce, Corresponding Secretary; C. D. Choate, Recording Secretary. On the 9th of December, 1878, there were four standing committees appointed, Devotional, Mission, Membership and Visiting, and the following persons were elected chairman of said committees: Linus E. Sherman of Devotional, N. Tooker of Mission, P. S. Williams of Membership, and J. W. Taylor of Visiting.

At the annual election of officers January 13th, 1879, the following changes were made: Linus E. Sherman, First Vice President; Geo. De La Vergne, Second Vice President; and Will. D. Gaby, Recording Secretary; and at same meeting Mrs. S. G. Cleveland, of Chicago, was employed as General Secretary.

God has blessed the work, and the Association is now in a prosperous condition, having large and commodious reading rooms in Union Block, with a supply of books, magazines, papers, writing material, etc., free to all. A daily noon-day prayer meeting is sustained, and devotional meetings every Tuesday evening. A general invitation is extended to all to visit the rooms and to enjoy perfect freedom in any or all their meetings.

J. H. WOODGATE, President.

S. G. CLEVELAND, General Secretary.

DENVER AND SOUTH PARK RAILROAD.

To Leadville,
Kokomo,
Ten Mile,
Gunnison Valley,
Fairplay,
Alma,
Dudley,
St. Johns,
Hamilton,
Breckenridge,
Montezuma,
Morrison, etc.

SHORTEST AND MOST DIRECT ROUTE

For all points above. This road passes through the renowned Platte Canon, and crosses the Kenosha Range, attaining the highest elevation of any railroad in North America—10,000 feet—affording the tourist and pleasure-seeker the most delightful and varied mountain scenery, and the best hunting and fishing grounds.

The famous Horton Reclining Chair Car attached to night trains.

LESS STAGING AND BETTER TIME

Than by any other route.
